Restriction to one of the following inventions is required under 35 U.S.C. 121:

- I. Claims 1-7 drawn to a method of preparing antibiotic resistant bacteria, classified in Class 435, subclass 43, for example.
- II. Claims 8 drawn to antibiotic resistant bacteria, classified in Class 435, subclass 252.1, for example.
- III. Claims 9 drawn to a process of assessing antibacterial activity of a test compound, classified in Class 435, subclass 32, for example.
- IV. Claim 10, drawn to a process of making an antibacterial agent by amplification, classified according to the chemical nature of the agent.
- V. Claim 11 drawn to an antibacterial agent against stationary phase bacteria, classified in various classes depending on the chemical nature of the agent.
- VI. Claim 12-15 and 19 drawn to a chemical compound and compositions thereof having antibacterial activity against antibiotic resistant bacteria, classified in various classes depending on the chemical nature of the agent.
- VII. Claims 16-18 drawn to a method of using an antibacterial agent, classified in various classes depending on the chemical nature of the agent.

Inventions I and II are related as process of making and product made. The inventions are distinct if either or both of the following can be shown: (1) that the process as claimed can be used to make other and materially different product or (2) that the product as claimed can be made by another and materially different process (MPEP § 806.05(f)). In the instant case the product as claimed can be made by another and material different process, such as by isolation from hospital patients having nosocomial infections.

Inventions II and III are related as product and process of use. The inventions can be shown to be distinct if either or both of the following can be shown: (1) the process for using the product as claimed can be practiced with another materially different product or (2) the product as claimed can be used in a materially different process of using that product (MPEP 806.05(h)). In the instant case the product as claimed can be used in a process for obtaining antibodies or as host cells in processes involving the use of recombinant DNA or for the production of single cell protein for nutritional supplementation.

Inventions V/VI and VII are related as product and process of use. The inventions can be shown to be distinct if either or both of the following can be shown: (1) the process for using the product as claimed can be practiced with another materially different product or (2) the product as claimed can be used in a materially different process of using that product (MPEP 806.05(h)). In the instant case the product as claimed can be used in a materially different process of using that product such as a growth promoter in cattle or as a fungicide or insecticide.

Inventions IV and V are related as process of making and product made. The inventions are distinct if either or both of the following can be shown: (1) that the process as claimed can be used to make other and materially different product or (2) that the product as claimed can be made by another and materially different process (MPEP § 806.05(f)). In the instant case the product as claimed can be made by another and materially different process, such as by chemical synthesis or by fermentation with a suitable microorganism.

Each of groups II, V and VI is directed to separate and distinct inventions, Group II is directed to bacterial product, Group V is directed to an antibacterial agent against stationary stage bacteria and group VI is directed to an antibacterial agent against resistant bacteria. The products of groups II, V and VI would be expected to have distinct morphological, functional and physiological properties as evidenced by divergent classification, process of making and process of using. These products are not required one for the other.

Each of groups I, III, IV and VII is directed to separate and distinct inventions, The method of Group I is a method of making bacteria, group III is directed to a conventional method of testing, Group IV is directed to a method of making a composition and Group VII is directed to a to a method of using an agent. These methods are distinct both physically and functionally, require different process steps and produce different products and/or achieve different results.

The several inventions above are independent and distinct, each from the other. They have acquired a separate status in the art as a separate subject for inventive effect and require independent searches (as indicated by the different classification). The search for each of the above inventions is not co-extensive particularly with regard to the literature search. Further, a reference which would anticipate the invention of Group I would not necessarily anticipate or make obvious the any of the other groups.

Art Unit 1651

For these reasons restriction for examination purposes is proper.

Applicant is advised that the response to this requirement to be complete must include an election of the invention to be examined even though the requirement be traversed.

Applicant is reminded that upon the cancellation of claims to a non-elected invention, the inventorship must be amended in compliance with 37 C.F.R. § 1.48(b) if one or more of the currently named inventors is no longer an inventor of at least one claim remaining in the application. Any amendment of inventorship must be accompanied by a diligently-filed petition under 37 C.F.R. § 1.48(b) and by the fee required under 37 C.F.R. § 1.17(h).
